Subject Slone survey

“ my second concern is that the vast majority of women who enroll in Slone are likely to be on OCs. So I suspect that even if we detected a depression signal, HLR would still be unwilling to do further studies, writing the result off as an OC side effect!!”

“I haven’t seen the packet from HLR because I have been working at these past 2 days, but what Diane describes is just waht i expected from the “experts” meeting! Let’s face it, if HLR does an adequate study and it establishes causality, the stakes are beyond huge for them.”

Page 3.....Indeed, the inconclusive Jick study is being quoted by dermatologists as “proof” that there is no problem (we have anecdotal information that some dermatologists are actually distributing copies of the paper to patients to “off-set” the warnings in the new Medication Guide!). This is a dangerous misconception given the life-threatening nature of the possible problem.
