

SILICON VALLEY vs. HOLLYWOOD

WILL A PROPOSAL TO STOP DIGITAL COPYING END
THE FEUD OR START A WAR WITH CONSUMERS?

* BREAKFAST SEMINAR *

The Watergate, Washington, DC

8:30am-11:00am

June 4, 2002

The battle over digital piracy between Hollywood and Silicon Valley has started to heat up. On one side, movie studios claim that the high-tech industry needs to do more to protect the studios' intellectual property. On the other side, the high-tech industry agrees that copyright protection is important but not at the cost of consumers' rights and industry innovation.

Join us on June 4th as Technology Daily examines this issue and the recent "broadcast flag" proposal with a panel of major players in this debate.

Panelists:

Emery Simon, Business Software Alliance [confirmed]
Preston Padden, Walt Disney Company [confirmed]
Michael Epstein, Philips Consumer Electronics [confirmed]
John Mitchell, Seyfarth & Shaw [confirmed]
Fred Von Lohmann, Electronic Frontier Foundation [confirmed]
Al Mottur, Office of Sen. Ernest (Fritz) Hollings, D-S.C. [confirmed]
Matt Gerson, Vivendi Universal [confirmed]

Moderator: Drew Clark, Senior Writer – Technology Daily

Where: The Watergate
600 New Hampshire Ave, NW
Washington, DC

When: June 4th, 2002
8:30am-11:00am [continental breakfast provided]

Cost: FREE for Technology Daily subscribers
$300 for non-subscribers (includes two months of access to TechDaily)
Sponsorship opportunities available

Space is limited. To attend, please RSVP by May 17th by calling us at (202) 266-6005 or e-mail us at techdaily@nationaljournal.com.