PAGE 8

News

Thursday, June 10, 2004

5 settlers held for attack on Palestinian Violent clashes broke out yesterday afternoon between

IDF studying how to upgrade its APCs

for improving the protection of 50 M-113 APCs. It includes adding protective covering of three tons, a new engine, new tracks, and a driver's seat with power steering. The cost will be $20 million. Although the APC is 35 years old, the IDF is considering gradually upgrading hundreds of the old APCs because of their availability and chance against a roadside bomb or mine in war time, and the enemy can always increase the quantity of explosives. But here too there is good news. A group of scientists at Rafael is developing an electronic system that can discover explosives deep beneath the ground.

The solution therefore does not lie in passive protection, but development of the new system is forces for 2004 stands at NIS

1.3 billion, 23 percent less than last year. Ron-Tal believes that money can be saved by combining the Ground Forces and the

The budget of the ground

still a long way off.

No tank or APC stands a relatively low cost.

By Amnon Barzilai

Haaretz Correspondent

The two incidents last month in which 11 IDF soldiers were killed in APCs in Gaza have again raised the issue of how the army should deal with the threat of missiles and bombs against its military vehicles.

The team dealing with the Merkava tank plan in the Defense Ministry is currently building a prototype of a heavy APC ("Nemera") based on a Merkava Mark 1 tank, which is no longer serviceable and whose turret has been removed

The Nemera's most signifiture cant advantage is the high level of protection it provides and its ers, the ground forces have deweapons systems; the disadvantage is its high price. The army team believes it will cost some $750,000 to build one APC ofthistype M-113s.

Israel is considered a world leader in armored protection, and some of the Israeli security industries have developed a revolutionary approach to armored combat vehicles. They believe that adding armor-plating to an APC is an old-fashioned approach that has outlived its usefulness, as new missiles are capable of piercing armor or finding weak spots in the seams of the protective armor. The new approach is protection based on radar and electronics that can deflect an approaching missile.

Following long-range assessments, the ground corps forces have concluded that light infantry should be given precedence over heavy infantry. Next month three American Striker APCs will arrive here for a long series of examinations and experiments. When the results are collated, the army will decide what kind of protection is needed for the infantry.

The decision in principle to acquire the Striker was preceded by visits to Fort Knox, Kentucky, by Chief of Staff Moshe Ya'alon and the commander of the ground forces, Yiftah Ron-

Tal. IDF officers are pleased Technological and Logistics Division of the army, as many with the APC's ability to perform and its relatively light weight, and are not particularly worried about criticism in the U.S. about the Striker's similar functions are per formed by both. The chief of staff thinks otherwise. Ron-Tal claims that the faulty protective system. slashed budget has put the The Striker, which rides on ground forces' flagship project wheels, is an expression of the "a digital ground force " - at move toward a different type of risk. The project involves the development of a command warfare which is expected to take place to a large extent in and control system which apurban areas. This assessment is parently has no equal in any army in the world today. It based to a certain extent on guess work, but military intelliwould put the senior officers of gence does not believe that the entire IDF, as far up as the large-scale battles of the type chief of staff-on the ground, in fought in the Yom Kippur War the air, and at sea - on one comare likely in the foreseeable fumunications system. The proiect, which would take eight Until the IDF gets its Strikyears to complete, is expected to cost some NIS 5 billion. cided to rely on the Achzarit In order to save the project, heavy infantry assault vehicle Ron-Tal has proposed to the built on the basis of the Russian German chief of staff to fund T-55s, and to try to upgrade the half of it in return for Israeli technological know-how. The Last week, after a year-and-Germans have not yet given a-half's delay, the deal known as Project Bazelet was signed with Israel Military Industries their response. If they turn down the offer, the IDF is expected to seek another partner settlers from Yitzhar and police, after officers arrived at the settlement to investigate a complaint filed by a local Palestinian shepherd that his sheep were stolen. The police found the Palestinian's sheep in a pen next to Yitzhar, Israel Radio reported. When the officers attempted to return the sheep to their Palestinian owner, five settlers arrived and proceeded to attack the Palestinian. The settlers resisted arrest and fled into the settlement, locking its front gate. Police called for backup and were reinforced by officers from the Yasam special patrol unit, who were able to enter the settlement, overpower the five settlers and arrest them. Elsewhere in the territories, three Palestinians were injured during a demonstration against the separation fence in the village of al-Žawiya, Palestinian sources told Army Radio. Hundreds of villagers clashed with troops during the demonstration. The section of the fence there is intended to separate Ariel from nearby Palestinian villages. including al-Zawiya, southwest of Nablus.(Haaretz Staff)

Jewish residents join appeal against separation fence in J'lem

ter, Sheikh Sa'ad.

By Yuval Yoaz Haaretz Correspondent

they are "deeply worried by the Some 20 Jewish residents of severe blow the barrier will in-Jerusalem have joined the appeal of the Arab neighborhood of Jabel Mukhaber against the Defense Ministry's order to confiscate their lands to build the separation barrier. The appeal is to be heard in Tel Aviv's Magistrate's Court today.

The Jewish petitioners, who neighborhoods Abu Tor, Arnona, Baka, Talpiot and the German Colony, close to Jabel to expropriate lands in the heart of Jabel Mukhaber, cutting the village in two and severing it from its southern quarflict on the Arab neighborin two. hood's residents." Since the fence is being built in their name as well, and to preserve their security, the petitioners say the barrier's construction directly pertains to them.

The barrier's planned route "will enclose and strangle the residents of Jabel Mukhaber, west separating parents and children, brothers and relatives, and depriving the residents of access to medical services, schools employment, family visits and any contact with the world outside their restricted neighborhood," they say.

They say that if a barrier must be built, it should be built pal border," he wrote

Another statement attached to the appeal is from Amir report to be published in Cheshin, who until 1994 served Jane's Defence Weekly next for many years as advisor for week Arab affairs to Jerusalem's Called the Delilah-GL mayor. "Sheikh Sa'ad quarter (ground launch), the missile has always been part of the the could reach into the territory area in south Jerusalem called of all of Israel's neighbors and Sawahara (Jabel fulfills a 10-year quest for a Mukhaber), and Jerusalem's such a missile, experts told municipality recognized this the London-based publication. reality and the fact that Sheikh The Delilah-GL (ground Sa'ad is an enclave that is part launch) is an adaptation of the of west Sawahara, and provid-Delilah, its air-launched preed the quarter with municipal decessor, Jane's said, quoting officials at Israel Military Inservices, although the munici dustries, where the missile is pality knew that formally this quarter is outside the municimade

The missile powered by a

The advanced missile includes a high explosive 30-kg warhead and is GPS guided (global positioning system). The missile can also hover over an area before confirming its target via real-time visual intelligence transmitted back to the operator, Jane's reports.

The missile can be fitted with various payloads. One is an infrared device with electro-optical seekers for target

Please find today's TV and cinema listings

Israel developed the new technology after a decade of trying to obtain surface-tosurface cruise missiles. The United States has twice denied Israeli requests to purchase Tomahawk land-attack cruise missiles, Jane's reported.

In the 1980s, Israel deployed a long-range surfaceto-surface missile, called Jericho II. Foreign reports say it has a range of at least 1,500 km, can carry a payload of 1,000 kg and is suitable for nuclear weapons.

inside the International Herald Tribune.

Letters to the Editor

Radical agents

bombers are good.

Comparison with Finland may be a good point to kick Arab Israelis are correct to our government, and Mr.

Surroundings / Esther Zandberg

have been joined by Rabbis for Human Rights, are from the

Mukhaber The Defense Ministry plans

All dressed in white

Gallery

mistic about the idea of installing special sidewalk markers along the perimeter of Tel Aviv's White City, as permanent and orderly pavements are almost as rare a sight in Tel Aviv as clean ones. Markers were put on the sidewalk at the corner of Rothschild and Nahmani on Sunday, as part of the special events marking Unesco's (the United Nations Education, Scientific and Cultural Organization) designation of Tel Aviv's White City as a World Heritage Site.

The White City is a collection of beautiful buildings in the International Style of architecture, known as Bauhaus, built in the city's center from the 1930s until the 1950s. Euphoria prevailed during the week of the Unesco declaration, and one could believe for a moment that a bright future also awaits the city's paving stones.

Unesco's recognition came 20 years after Tel Aviv began to be called the White City in the wake of an exhibition in the Tel Aviv Museum of Art, and 10 years after an international conference in Tel Aviv that advertised its name internationally as the Bauhaus city.

This week's announcement covered the city with a sweetish cloud of optimism, promises and honors, flying flags and a few thought-provoking moments. For example, the special session of the Tel Aviv Municipal Council, at which the official plaque was given by Unesco representatives, was festive and moving. The declaration mentioned the architectural and urban uniqueness of the White City, and it was read aloud to those present in the hall in Hebrew, English and Arabic. Deputy Mayor Rifat Turk, an Arab resident of Jaffa, was chosen to read the declaration in his native

here's something opti- tongue, and found himself praising the city whose explicit goal was the rejection of his city, Jaffa, and of his culture > there was an unveiling ceremony for a plaque with the text of the declaration, which was affixed at the entrance to City Hall – which may be slated for demolition or having its characteristic facade removed during these days of recognition of the value of Tel Aviv's architectural legacy. The participants in the meeting could have seen how the concrete parts of the facade of the building facing

> Rabin Square were being dismantled, and demolition threatens under the guise of building an underground parking lot. Hebrew Book Week, traditionally held in the square, opened this week - transferred to Yarkon Park at the edge of the city. Another architectural site endangered by proposed renovations and changes is the Mann Auditorium, a magnificent scion of the International Style. On Monday, the theater was the venue of a performance in honor of the Unesco declaration, entitled "This Summer You'll Wear White." For many in the audience, this may also have been the performance marking a farewell to the theater in it original form. As many types of local entertainment as possible were stuffed into the performance – song and dance, rap and Naomi Shemer, the Batsheva Company and Shimon Peres, Mayumana and veteran actress Hannah Meron, and Maya Buskila, who sang an old Tel song, Aviv " Gan (Sycamore Hashikmim" Park). All these passed in a procession on the stage for three whole hours without intermission, and represented familiar items that don't need the stamp of an international organization. On Monday, the exhibition

At the end of the session,

Classic Bauhaus: 3 Ben Ami Street in Tel Aviv

"To Live on the Sands" the White City, after heading opened at the Helena Rubinthe municipal preservation stein Pavilion of Contempodepartment and conducting rary Art in the Tel Aviv Musehouse-to-house battles in um. It presents the White preparing the urban preser-City's architectural assets vation plan and wording the and perpetuates the myth that request for the Unesco decla-Tel Aviv arose ex nihilo on the ration. The decision to add the sands, or on a "tabula rasa (in the words of the curator, White City to the World Herarchitect Nitza Szmuk, in a itage list was made last July. film clip that was screened). The declaration applies to the The exhibition is as beautiful areas of Rothschild Bouleas a lyrical black-and-white vard, the Zina Dizengoff Cirphoto from the archives and cle and Bialik Street, which like the Bauhaus buildings at include the characteristic artheir best. But one could have chitectural totality and the expected more pointed, releurban lines that endow the vant, and courageous inforcity with its unique quality, according to the declaration. mation and viewpoints from Szmuk, who has accumulated As a condition to the city's bebattle scars in the service of ing added to the World Heritage Site list, the municipali- tions to the public regarding ty promised to refrain from building additions and from irregular construction in the areas covered by the declaration, and to approve the preservation plan, sitting with the Tel Aviv District Committee for Planning and Building. About 400 objections and threats of lawsuits for loss of rights in the buildings slated for preservation stand between the preservation plan and its approval, whose monetary value is estimated at NIS 1.5 billion.

The questions of whether Tel Aviv can abide by Unesco conditions, and what their cost is, were the major issues during the second session of the architectural conference that took place on which doesn't see itself as a Tuesday at the Tel Aviv Mumuseum - is really worthy of seum. From what was said at the conference by City Engi-Heritage list. neer Danny Kaiser, the financial adviser to the preservation plan Hagai Yaron and architect Zofia Santo, who is in charge on behalf of the municipality of the constitutional aspect of the plan, it emerged that without government intervention in preservation and a change in the law, there is little chance that Tel Aviv will long remain on the World Heritage list. At present, says Santo, "the planning and construction law is hostile to preservation." In ordinary times, preservation is a stepchild of the Tel Aviv Municipality. The preservation department has been operating for years with insufficient manpower: nor was it reinforced in honor of the Unesco declaration. The burden on the department causes exhausting bureaucratic foot-dragging, which arouses hostility among all those who are in need of its services. The municipality, which has invested considerable resources in the declaration events, has never found it necessary to invest in proper publicity and in explanathe preservation plan and its importance. This vagueness is very convenient for opponents of the plan, so they may exaggerate the difficulties and the financial losses of preservation and rake in large profits from new construction. The future of the White City as a World Heritage Site doesn't look rosy even after the speech by Prof. Natalia

Dushkin, who was appointed there's no chance of his words by the UN to prepare the declaration file. Although she receiving serious consideration. Until the Arab Israelis found vestiges of an authentic heritage in Tel Aviv, her can say the same about calls words imply doubt as to from fanatic Arabs, they have whether a city like Tel Aviv much larger problems than - a new city with tremendous Mr. Lieberman pressure for development, being included in the World Border Police While she was showing abuse photos that she took in Tel Aviv and speaking in horror about the construction of additional stories in buildings chief orders civil rights lecture slated for preservation (an for troops" by Jonathan Lis, Yuval Yoaz and Eli Ashkenazi, original Israeli invention whose validity she doesn't ac-Haaretz, June 3 cept), she almost seemed to As for Border Police being regret her recommendation. held for alleged abuse of Pales-At the convention, which tinians, it only reflects a mere aroused a great deal of interfraction of how many Palesest in the architectural comtinians are abused by the Bormunity, there was no critider Police that we do not hear cism of preservation as a about - although such abuse is process that leads to gentriwell-documented by various fication, and to the forced deorganizations such as B'Tselem - if inquiring minds wish parture of low-income population, due to an increase in to do their own research. What the value of the assets. is particularly reprehensible is Maybe the time is not yet ripe for criticism, but it certainly is appropriate, so steps will be taken to regulate and moderate the process, and so the protection of architectural values will not come at the expense ior is almost as bad as the abuse that is carried out. of damage to humane values. In any case, if Tel Aviv survives the declaration Finnish and not week, it will only emerge stronger as a city of which they say that there are some more beautiful than it, but not one that is beautiful like it.

be concerned about statements Sarid never misses such or such as those made by former portunity. But it is simply not minister Avigdor Lieberman. fair, for several reasons:

However, they should be much 1. Finland does not have to more concerned about Arab spend enormous amounts of MKs vocally supporting terrormoney on its army.

ists who call for the destruction 2. Finland has lots of natur of Israel. They should care al resources more about the much stronger 3. Finland has a hard-workdemands of the Arabs for yet ing people. There you wouldn't find hordes of pushy "pitianother ethnic cleansing of Jews from the West Bank. They ful people" shouting on every corner that they don't receive should do more to close sumenough from the government. mer camps in the Galilee that are run by terrorists and teach Probably Mr. Sarid, living in a Israeli children that suicide nice, upscale neighborhood, has not seen them for awhile. I can invite him to visit the Most Jewish Israelis disaaree with Lieberman, and place where I live; he will find plenty of them there.

Yes, I'd probably like to be a Finn myself, but as long as I am an Israeli taxpayer, I'd support the government that tries to make my life a little easier. I don't have problems David Teich with the fact that it is cutting Petach Tikva welfare subsidies to those who don't want to work.

At the same time, I agree with the main point of the article - our educational system requires serious change. It is far even from the standards I Regarding "Border Police was used to in Bolshevik Soviet Union. But I don't believe we'll improve it is by increasing welfare payments. We have to change something in the educational system itself. By the way, I don't recall any major reforms that Mr. Sarid initiated as minister of education

> Alexander Shurygin Haifa

> > Richard Tesler

New York, NY

The burning of

wigs

that the excuse for such outra-I find it very unfortunate geous conduct is that it is the the Orthodox community is so determined to destroy possibly result of the heavy burden, the arduous duties, of the Border hundreds of wigs that they Police. To offer such justificaconsider not kosher. Wouldn't donating them to non-Jews tion for such depraved behavwho are suffering from the effects of chemotherapy or other Marlene Newesri maladies that cause baldness New York, NY be a better example of what it really means to be Jewish? We sell our bread before Pesach for virtually nothing; why not

Regarding "I'm not Bibi, do the same with the wigs? I'm a Finn" by Yossi Sarid, Haaretz, June 9