Principal Research Interests

Formal semantics and its connections with syntax, pragmatics, logic; related issues in philosophy of language and in cognitive science. Recent research concentrating on cross-linguistic quantification and more generally on issues of universality and typology in semantics; research on interaction of topic-focus structure, quantification-relevant structure, and various aspects of context-dependence in semantic interpretation; recent cooperative research with colleagues in Prague aimed at integrating Hajičová and Sgall's contemporary Prague school approach with work in formal semantics. Also recently engaged in cooperative research with Professor Hans Kamp on foundational issues concerning context-dependence in semantics. Philosophical interests include the relation between model-theoretic and psychologistic approaches to the foundations of semantics; and more generally on various logic-oriented and linguistics-oriented approaches to issues in natural language semantics and problems of compositionality. Recent areas of research interest: interaction of noun phrase semantics with verbal aspect; joint research with Russian colleagues aimed at integration of Russian lexical semantics (and some western lexical semantics) with formal semantics, sortal structures and sort-shifting, interface of lexical and compositional semantics. NSF grant 1999- 2003 with Borschev on the integration of formal and lexical semantics and the semantics of genitives. NSF grant 2004-07 with Borschev on Genitive of Negation in Russian and the integration of formal and lexical semantics.
