85% of Scots think it is possible to be tolerant of the rights of others and protective of traditional marriage.

71% of Scots don't believe that defending traditional marriage is discriminating against gays and lesbians.

69% of Scots think that although death or divorce may prevent it the ideal situation for a child is to be raised by a married mother and father.

53% of Scots believe that since gay and lesbian couples already have the same rights as married couples available to them under civil partnership they should not be allowed to redefine marriage for everyone else.

Supporting marriage and opposing any plans to redefine it.
